

RELIEF FUND GROWING HERE VERY SLOWLY

ANDERSON PEOPLE ALMOST TIGHT-WADS

NOT SUBSCRIBING

Other Towns in Different Portions of the State Are Outstripping Anderson in Helping Cause.

Anderson people turned a deaf ear yesterday to the pleas made through the columns of The Intelligencer for aid in raising the relief funds for the Belgians, and as a result there were few subscriptions to the cause.

Other towns in different parts of South Carolina are outstripping this city and all of them have made far more liberal contributions than has Anderson. The people of other sections have no more money than Anderson people, therefore it is reasonable to presume that they are a little more sympathetic than are the citizens of Anderson.

Local people are all ready and willing to admit that the cause is a just one and that some help should be extended to the people of the foreign countries; that the suffering women and children should be fed if possible; yet few of them care to lend any financial assistance in this direction. The following story from Paris, France, tells of how grateful the people over there are for the aid extended by American people:

"Preparations have been begun in France to welcome the officers in charge of the relief to be sent to the destitute non-combatants of the warring nations in Europe by the Rockefeller Foundation. The coming of the first vessel from America is awaited with impatience. Assistance is greatly needed and will be very welcome.

"Mr. Gabriel Hanotaux, formerly minister of foreign affairs and now president of the National Relief society and of the Franco-American society, wishes to thank the American public, in the name of these societies, for its sympathy and liberal generosity. In this connection Mr. Hanotaux said:

"It is impossible to conceive the degree and the extent of the misery and suffering undergone by the inhabitants of villages which have been occupied by the enemy."

"Mr. Hanotaux has addressed a circular letter to all the municipal mayors in the department of the Aisne asking them to endeavor to ascertain and to report the destruction in the various localities. Among the answers received is the following:

"I am sorry to be unable to comply with your request for the reason that I joined the colors as a volunteer and was compelled to resign the office of mayor. This town has been completely destroyed. There is no longer any city hall or any inhabitants to protect. Consequently I decided that it was best to leave, and although I am more than 50 years old I thought that perhaps France could make use of my services."

"Mr. Hanotaux quoted this letter as an example of many received by him. He said that although the suffering was acute and a large proportion of the population of Northern France was absolutely destitute and penniless, the patriotic ardor of the people and their faith in the final result were not in the least diminished or shaken."

HOUSE BURNED THIS MORNING

Residence of J. T. Snow on North Fant Street, With Contents, Destroyed.

The home of Mr. Jas. T. Snow on North Fant street was burned early this morning. The fire was discovered a little before one o'clock, but had gained such headway that but little of the household effects were saved. The origin of the fire is unknown. Mrs. Snow stated to a reporter of The Intelligencer that the family had not long retired, and were asleep. When they awakened the room was filled with smoke. The building being of wood, burned very rapidly and gave no chance to save much of the furniture. The fire department made a good run, and soon had two streams of water playing on the fire, but there was no chance to extinguish the blaze before the house was consumed.

The house and its contents were insured, but only partially covering the loss. The house was a substantial one, of six rooms, and was valued at about $3,500. $500 was carried on the furniture.

Will Ask For One Million More Troops

LONDON, Nov. 12. (1:15 a. m.)—It is reported that Premier Asquith will on Tuesday ask parliament's sanction for the raising of one million additional troops during the total of 2,000,000 men. It is understood that the government intends to raise a loan of $1,000,000,000 or more, probably at 4 per cent, and to increase the war loan the government may propose to raise a further $2,000,000,000 by increasing the income tax to half a

One Big Day

Anderson Will Try to Get Clemson Team to Have Exhibition Here.

With T. Frank Watrins, C. J. DeCamp, Porter A. Whaley and Mayor J. H. Godfrey behind the idea it is almost a certainty that Anderson can soon boast of a "Foot Ball Day." These men will make a trip to Clemson on next Wednesday to confer with Coach "Bob" Williams and the heads of the football team as to the possibility of staging one of the biggest games in Anderson and also making the day one of merry making and a general good time.

The main thing now is the arranging of the game and if that can be done it will be an easy matter to arrange the social features afterwards. This is not a new idea but one that has been tried and put into actual play by some of the larger cities and seems to be a great drawing card.

The games are arranged between two of the best and most evenly matched teams of the State thus insuring a good game. It is not known what teams can be secured or if the idea can be put through but games will be arranged if the teams can be secured.

Flour Mill

Will Be Built in Anderson Along Most Modern Lines—Working Soon.

R. E. Burris, on his return from Copens, where he has been to inspect the Midget flour mill, which is in operation in that place, says that he has about perfected plans for a plant to be run in the old Corona knitting mill building if the building can be secured by him from G. W. Evans, owner of the property. This building is near the freight depot and as a siding from the railroad runs up to the building it will be an ideal location for the plant.

Mr. Burris in talking about the Midget mill says that the farmer can see that he is getting flour from his wheat as the mill is enclosed in glass. A corn mill and a feed mill will be run in connection with the flour mill. The Midget mill has a capacity of 25 barrels a day. The installing of the mill will mean an expenditure of between $5,000 and $6,000.

Mr. Burris hopes to have the feed mill and corn mill in operation by the first of January, and the flour mill in operation by the first of June.

Succumbed to Injuries Received When She Fell into Fire at Home in Mill Village.

TOUR OF EUROPE

From July 28 to 31 we stopped in Lucerne, enjoying the wonderful scenery, the quaint city, the fine concerts, and a good rest. At one of the concerts, I happened to sit next to Massacani, the composer. I didn't know it until the night when an acquaintance told me of it. Of course, we visited the Lion of Lucerne several times. No picture or description can do it justice; it must be seen. Near it is the "Glacier Garden," where the effects of the glacial period in geology are revealed by excavations.

The Swiss people impress you by their industry, courtesy, intelligence and cleanliness. If a microbe accidentally got into Switzerland he'd commit suicide from loneliness. The bathing proposition in the average European hotel is a serious one. A typical experience was that of my first night in Lucerne. Shortly after dinner I rang and requested to be shown to the bathroom. The maid asked "When?" "Immediately," I replied. She went away and soon came back to say that the bathroom was already engaged until ten o'clock and after that there would be no more hot water. "How soon can I get a warm bath in the morning?" "Oh, you can get a cold bath at seven and a warm one at ten."

We left Lucerne at 7 a. m. July 31 for London. We spent two hours between trains walking about the pretty city of Basel. After cutting across the corner of Alsace, we spent the afternoon traversing a beautiful French farming region. Every railway bridge, tunnel and station was guarded, and at Troyes we passed a troop train. We spent the night in Paris, and proceeded to London next day, by way of Boulogne and Folkestone. The weather was clear.

For the next three weeks London was our headquarters. We visited the principal places of literary and historical interest in the city and went to the theatre one afternoon. Between the acts afternoon tea was served. We made short excursions by train or bus or motor to Windsor, Hampton Court, Eton, Stratford, Warwick, Kenilworth, Oxford, etc. On the same campus of Magdalen College, Oxford, we had the pleasure of seeing Misses Kate Hill and Ella Graham of Baton Rouge.

One day in Oxford, London, I saw my name over an auctioneer's shop, so went in and got acquainted with the proprietor. Another day I was taken to a bookshop to tell me which edition of "Ladbroke Grove" was. He looked puzzled till I showed him the number on a card, then said, "Oh, cysty is this wa."

I attended a cricket game—that is, I sat through the first two hours of the first inning. I found it fully as exciting as a faculty meeting and the spectators were as enthusiastic as dead mutes at a funeral.

Another day I spent in walking along the fine country road from Hampstead Heath, through Bayswater, toward St. Albans. I lunched at "The Green Dragon," a typical English wayside inn.

In the morning of August 21 we saw a partial eclipse of the sun and in the afternoon boarded the Allan Line steamer for Montreal. We had a very stormy voyage, varied by a sight of the aurora borealis and two icebergs. Our port holes were covered with blankets at night so that no light could betray us to a possible German cruiser.

Mrs. Bonham was very sick and for four days kept her cabin. I seized this opportunity to get acquainted with several young ladies. The day I carried Mrs. B. on deck, one of them said, "I am glad to see that your daughter is well enough to come up today." I went up on the upper deck and looked at the sky.

We found that the British are as good as losers as the Germans, but they don't understand so well the art of making passengers comfortable. Quebec was our first stop on this side; so we got off there and after seeing that quaint city proceeded by train to Montreal, where we also found much to interest us. September 8 we crossed the border and reflected with a sigh of pleasure that the best thing about foreign travel is the added appreciation of your own country which it inspires.

Now, just a few words about the war, so far as my observation of it went. I was in Paris the night Jaures was assassinated—July 31—and I stopped at a hotel across the street from the Gare de l'Est, whence troops and supplies were being crained all night. Under the circumstances one would have expected a volatile people like the Parisians to be wildly excited, but to my surprise, though the station, the street and the square were packed with citizens, they were quiet. When a company marched into the station, the crowds cheered heartily, enthusiastically, but not excitedly; and when they sang the Marseillaise (which they did frequently) they sang it solemnly—a very difficult thing to realize. The whole scene impressed me with the fact that the French people did not want war, that they realized the horrors and responsibilities it entailed, but neither were they afraid to fight, and if it were forced on them they were prepared to carry it through until the other party cried "Hold! enough."

In England I found the same attitude—reluctant to go to war, once the Kaiser's punitive diplomacy and treacherous invasion of Belgium forced them to do so, the British people dropped politics and practiced patriotism. They went dutifully, methodically and energetically about their preparations with a grim determination that boded little good for their enemies. Home rule and suffragettes dropped into the background, the parties in Parliament became a unit and voted any money, men or supplies the government asked for. The Ulster Volunteers, enlisted to oppose home rule, offered their services for duty in the field; Sir John French, who had resigned the command of the army last spring rather than lead it against the "Disturbances," was offered a command and all the world knows how faithfully and ably he has discharged his duty. The suffragettes dropped bombs and hatspins and began scraping lint and knitting the socks Kitchener called for. The Prince of Wales started a fund to raise 200,000 pounds for the relief of those women and children whose bread-winners had enlisted; in less than three weeks the fund had reached one million pounds and was still mounting.

So quietly and thoroughly did Kitchener do his work that no one outside the official circles even suspected that he had an army ready to move into the field after Sir John French's army landed at Boulogne. Even the soldiers themselves did not know their destination when ordered to embark.

The kindness of the British (both public and private) to distressed Americans surpasses all praise. Every American I saw in London had something to tell of English generosity and courtesy.

American sympathies are with the allies, rightly so, I think; but we must not lose sight of the fact that the Germans are a splendid and noble people and that this war was not made by the German people, but by the German officials. Why, then, do not the people refuse to fight in such an unjust war? For the same reason that Americans would have enlisted last spring had President Wilson allowed a war on Mexico, thought most of us would have thought it foolish and needless war. So, when the emperor called for them, the Germans patriotically responded and are putting up a magnificent fight in a bad cause. As to the outcome, I believe that eventually the allies will win, but I hope to see the splendid German people given a chance—under a republican form of government—to realize their enlightened ideals of culture and science, untrammelled by the medieval political theories of the house of Hohenzollern.
